Neither Bonnets Nor Hats to Be Worn in Tomlinson Hall-Movements of People.

There are to be almost no social affairs for the present week. The May festival will absorb the entire attention of every one. More season tickets have been sold than ever before, and people who are known as those who are in the realm of society expect to give all their time and strength in attending the six concerts. The clubs have postponed their meetings and anything that will interfere with the concerts has been made a secondary consideration. Numbers of guests have arrived for the festival and many others will come Monday. Indianapolis women will be entertainers of friends and the week will be doubly cne of festivity. The audience is expected to be bonnetless. Even the 'Dutch' bonnets will not be considered necessary, especially as the concerts are in Tomlinson Hall, where the seats are all on a level. Concert and matinee parties will be the rule. The festival is such an assured success from every point of view that an en-thusiasm and excitement has taken hold of the people. As long as there is no doubt in any direction, even among the guaranters, there will be such an enjoyment among the people as the festival has not been able to give in any former year.

A young married woman was talking of the time when she was a bride and her experience in sending out invitations. She lived in another city and the to-be husband here. He, being a man well known, wished to announce the fact of his marriage to his many friends by the issuing of invitations. He made out his list and thought he had every one's name on it. After the list was sent he would meet friends on the street and remember he had not sent their names. Of some he was not so sure and so a letter or a telegram every day to the to-be bride contained additional names. Even up to the night before the wedding new names reached the other city. A few weeks after the wedding when the bride and groom had returned from their trip, at well-known judge met the groom and congratulated him and after a while said that he was glad to know that the groom had remembered him so well. When he was asked his meaning, the judge said: "Oh, I knew you wanted to remember me for I received three invitations to

PALE FACES TURN RED. Professor Starr's Anthropological Ideas Further Elaborated. Chicago Post.

Pale faces will become red men. That is the theory of Prof. Frederick Starr, the well-known anthropologist of the Chicago University, and was advocated by him in recent lecture at Indianapolis. "My theory is not the generally accepted one as to the origin of the American Indian," said the Professor, to a reporter of the Post. "I think, however, that the line of study in that direction is tending toward the reception of my views and I believe that what I claim will be demonstrated, as far as any such fact may be demonstrated, by experiment and scientific investigation. do not make these statements as an assertion, but merely in a tentative way. I suggested the result of much thought on my part when giving my lecture upon the origin of the American Indian. "To go into the subject fully and as briefly as possible, I will ask you to consider the

to Sitka. You will find that all up and down the coast the type of people, from outward appearance, is of the red man, the American Indian. They are fishermen and trappers, and depend upon the sea and forests for their existence, living in huts and as best they may in a very aboriginal manner. These people are, to all external appearance, of one type. Dark skin, high heek bones, black eyes and straight, black hair. Go among them and you will find that they have in different sections, notwithstanding their similarity of external appearance, different forms and ideas of worship and not the same stories and myths. They do not have the same customs. and in fact are of many tribes, though seeming alike from outward appearance. The Europeans claim that the American Indians first came from Europe, Mongolians claim that they came from Asia, and you will find that every class of people on the earth has claimed that the American Indian came exclusively from its race. Now, instead of the American Indian having come originally from any one race or country, is it not more plausible to believe that from influences of climate, barbarity of custom, etc., they became one type from many through those influences rather than to believe that they came originally from "It is ridiculous to claim that the Indian will even dominate the civilized citizen of the United States, as he is or as he will be in a thousand years from now, as I was quoted as having said. My claim is this, as the French anthropologists claim, that we all are growing through the same influences toward the type of the red man. The French claim that even the negro has changed onefourth in that direction. Take the cartoons, for example, of which every one may judge for himself. They are each and every one based upon some fact. How is John Buil characterized? As a round-faced, burly fellow of jovial physiognomy. How is the Yankee and the typical Southerner, very dissimilar, though coming from England originally in both instances, characterized? Everybody knows the tall, raw-boned Yankee, who differs the least from the Indian because he has been here longest. Southerner is dark-skinned, with black hair and high cheek bones, and is short in stature, just as were the Southern Indians. "This, of course, is only an example, but may be considered seriously to weigh in the study of the question. Why should not the same influences, which seem to tend toward forming a similar American Indian type, bring about the same result as in the past, even in the face of the counter influences of civilization We live in houses are not exposed, do not hunt, fish, and fight one another on the plains for our living, and our growth will be less rapid than was theirs. We also have a constant pouring in of immigration, which retards any such tendency very materially by the intermixture of marriage. "I can only assert that this growth is apparent, for we are very young, comparatively speaking. I am to make some experiments of measurement and comparison between the Datch of Pennsylvania, who have lived here without intermarrying for over one hundred and fifty years, and the native German who is coming to this country to-day. I will study by experiment in the schools also. If my experiments do not result favorably to my theory, it will only be a negative influence against it, and we must look further for substantiation, but if they support my views the fact will be couraging to my theory upon this question." Education for a Cent.

Philadelphia Record. Some of the money order clerks at the various postal stations about town, who have always been sweet tempered heretofore, have grown to be snappish and disagreeable during the past few days. "What makes me disagreeable?" cried one of the clerks vesterday, glaring through the grated window at his interrogator. "Well, I'll tell you, and when I'm through you'll wonder that I ain't crazy. During the last few days there have been nearly a hundred school girls in here to buy money orders for a cent each. It seems their teachers put them up to it, so as to educate them in the way the money order business is transacted by the United States government. So they come piling in upon us with requests for one-cent money orders. Of course, it is just as much trouble to issue a money order for a penny as for $100, and so you can imagine the annoy-ance it is to us."

INDIANA GOLD FEVER

County That Will Revolutionize Gold Mining in This State.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. COLUMBUS, Ind., May 11.-Until quite recently the rugged hills in Brown county have not been made to yield up their golden treasure to any great extent, but the newly introduced machine which has been patented by Pence Brothers, of this city, Denver, Col., and Salt Lake City, U. T., will bring about the revolution in gold mining that has long been sought for in this out-of-the-way section of Indiana. A gold story, especially from Indiana, is looked on as having at least 80 per cent, of fiction, but there is gold in the Brown county field, and pure gold at that. It is what is known as glacier gold, and it abounds in the hills and valleys, and, like pebbles and fine sand, it is separate from any other substance. Flakes that will assay from $1 to $2 are frequently picked up, and beaux and belles alike in the gold district carry "lucky finds," some of which they have inherited from their parents, and which they treasure as much on this account as for the in-

It must not be understood that gold crops out of the earth in Brown county to obstruct the traveler, or that it is, like other objects, easily seen by the traveler in that region. This would be a wild and untrue statement, yet in certain cases it does lay in plain view, and may be as easily found as a pebble in a sand bar. It is usually just after a rainfail that one is able to secure the bright metal for the picking of Still, an inexperienced gold hunter might pass it by. Until the invention of Pence Brothers' machine it was thought that the gold that could be seen without the aid of a glass was all there was in the hills of Brown county, but the facts are far from this. The larger part of the profits that will now be made by the workers of the Indiana gold field will come from the saving of dust gold, or that part of the metal that cannot be readily seen. This the new machine will do with one-fourth the amount of water that is required to operate the machines used in the Western mines. As the water question is the principal one in the mining of gold in this part of the State, it is believed now that this obstruction has been overcome

As early as 1846 gold was found in Brown county, and many times did expert miners from California try their machines in trying to secure it, but on account of the absence of water in sufficient quantity failed to make it pay. The territory where gold has been found in Indiana embraces about seventy-eight square miles, and includes parts of Brown, Johnson and Monroe counties the field being known locally as the headwaters of Salt creek. Bear Wallow ridge is in this field, and it has an elevation of 1.241 feet above sea level, being but six feet lower than the highest point in the State, and on this account the water from rainfall flows rapidly away, and the goldhunting season is necessarily short. Since gold was first found in Brown county has been constantly sought after, and the typical Brown county citizen is now as full of hope that some one will find a rich lead as he was fifty years ago, before time rounded his shoulders, dimmed his eyes and turned his hair gray.

The hard working man in times past could make from one to two dollars a day mining gold and with this was content for his wants were few and easily satisfied It must be understood that the gold working season lasts about three months when rain is most frequent. There have been less gold flurries in Brown county than in any other gold bearing field in the United States. This is largely due to the silence maintained by the early settlers which has been transmitted to their children, not so much on account of selfishness, for they are a generous class, as on account of their desire for truthfulness. After a heavy rainfall and especially in the spring time, flakes of pure gold often as large as man's thumb nail are picked up from small sand bars where they are deposited by sudden turns of the water in its rush down the hillsides. Usually the "panning" of this sand is very profitable, but it must be conveyed to where there is water to wash it. With the Pence Brothers' machine this sand is easily worked and all the gold in it saved. Many thousands of dollars, it is claimed, have been secured from this field, but it ought to be understood that there is no accurate way of estimating the output, thought it is known to be larger than generally supposed.

The real value of gold land in times pas was estimated by the "creek frontage," for until scientific principles were applied to gold mining in this locality, it was not supposed that the precious metal would be found in any other place than in the creek bed, or the sand along its banks, while now the soil in the valleys and on the hilltops is made to yield up this much sought after metal.

The greatest hope of those now engaged in applying scientific principles to gold mining in this section does not lie in the expectation of finding a rich lead, but in the saving of the flour or dust gold that heretofore has been lost. On account of this new machine saving this, it is believed that large returns on the investment will be realized. Should a rich lead be struck, the world will know it soon enough. The experimental test is on and the find is good. It matters not where the soil taken from in the gold field, the bright metal can be shown by working it through the machine and the number of hands will be largely increased in the near future.

COFFEE HOUSE ON WHEELS. The First Wagon Earned Over $1,000 by Supplying 10-Cent Meals.

The Wayside Inn is the name of the handsome new luncheon wagon which the Church Temperance Society brought to New York last week to minister to the hungry and thirsty during the hours of the day and night. It stands in Herald Square, where the old one, the Owl, has stood for a year. The Owl has been removed to Sixth avenue, opposite Bryant Park, in which busy neighborhood it will continue the work it began two years ago, when it was established in

Not only in its outward appearance but in its interior fittings the new wagon is an improvement on the old. It was built in Worcester, Mass., at a cost of $1,000, and contains everything that is modern and useful in a "coffee-house on wheels." The original wagon, now about to retire to Sixth avenue, was the first of its kind to be introduced to New York. It cost $850, the money for its purchase having been raised through the efforts of the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Church Temperance Society. Its immediate mission was to counteract the influence of the all-night bar-rooms then about to be licensed. It was mustered into the service only as a night wagon, but it finally became so successful in meeting the requirements of the public that it was kept open in the day time as well. Its name, the Owl, is really a misnomer,. under the existing conditions, but it will still be retained.

It became apparent some months ago that the profits of the business of the Owl would soon warrant the society in buying another similar wagon, for it was the first intention of the originators of the scheme to place the wagons in different parts of the city as fast as possible. During the first year the wagon was not self-sustaining, but in 1894 there were supplied 67,600 10-cent meals, which left a profit of $1,103, the major part of which has been used in the purchase of the new wagon.

A Good Deal of Interference. Detroit Free Press.

The other day a citizen called at the stamp window of the postoffice and laid two pennies on the shelf. The clerk looked at him for ten seconds and then queried: "Two ones?" "No, of course not! When a man lays down 2 cents he wants a 2-cent stamp, of "Not always."

"But that's the inference. After this when you see two pennies down here you can infer that a 2-cent stamp is wanted.' Next day the same man called and put down a ten-dollar bill, and before he could speak the clerk shoved it back to him with the remark: "The government doesn't issue any."

"Any thousand-cent stamps. Sorry can't accommodate you.' "Who asked for a thousand-cent stamp?" "You did. Whenever a man lays down a ten-dollar bill the inference is that he wants one of those stamps, but as I said, they are not issued." The man picked up his bill and walked out with a red face, but five minutes later refurned and dropped a clgar on the shelf and good-naturedly queried: "And what do you infer from that?"
"Smoke-shake," replied the clerk, and the two became friends.
